Buy Christmas Seals

The Christmas Seals which are issued annually are now being distributed in Northfield and hundreds of letters have been sent out in the mails to our children.

Mrs. Robert Abbott of Main street is the representative here of the Franklin County Public Health Association and returns should be made to her as early as possible. The Seals will also be on sale at the various stores in both sections. This is the 42nd anniversary of the Seal sale and the revenue each year has been allocated to the control of Tuberculosis throughout the nation. Be sure to buy your seals early and make your returns to Mrs. Abbott, an envelope being provided for this purpose in the letters with enclosure of seals.

Packages For Camiers Arrive at Destination

Numerous acknowledgments of packages received in Camiers have already arrived in Northfield. Each letter has indicated the deep and lasting impression the packages has made upon the recipients, with overtones of great happiness about the "adoption" program in general.

Next week's PRESS will carry translations of a number of these letters, with more being published with each succeeding week. The extended maritime strike still affects the shipment of the crates to Camiers. Due to the pile up of material on the docks of New York, clearance for the Camiers cases is being held up. It is expected that the final approval and shipping orders will be received early next week.

The collection of more items for future shipments to Camiers will continue as before, with another shipment planned for the near future, as soon as a sufficient quantity of material is on hand.

Drive for Funds Starts This Week

Starting this week the Franklin County Public Hospital is conducting its annual drive for funds to offset the cost of charitable work done by the hospital during the past year. This drive is limited to towns outside of Greenfield.

Greenfield contributes its share to the Franklin County Hospital for this purpose through its Community Chest. In 1948, the amount contributed by the people of Greenfield through the Chest was $8,600.

Charitable work done by the hospital amounts to approximately $18,000 annually. This is used for free and part-free hospitalization for needy patients and for the operation of various free clinics. These clinics are: Mental and Child Guidance Clinic; Cancer and Tumor Clinic; Pediatric Clinic; Dental Clinic; Tuberculosis Clinic, held three times monthly; Crippled Children's and Speech Clinic; and an Orthopedic Clinic.

The money expended for this purpose is not properly chargeable to the fees paid by paying patients. It should be a direct obligation for all the people of Franklin County to undertake in order to provide for its needs.

The Franklin County Public Hospital hopes to obtain $10,000 from the towns outside of Greenfield during this drive. Goals for each town have not been set. There will be some personal solicitation however, an intensive mail campaign is expected to bring in most of the contributions. The Chairmen in the various county towns include: Paul D. Shores and Mrs. Theodore Cronyn, Bernardston; Winston Healy, Charlemont; Robert E. Coombs, Colrain, Griswoldville and Shattuckville; Howard R. Walte, Whately; Mrs. William L. Kimball, Orange; Roman R. Skibiski and Clarence F. Clark, South Deerfield and Sunderland; Charles Hawkitt and Olaf Hoff, Jr., Turners Falls; Montague and Gill; Harry M. Chamberlain and Harold G. Hoyt, Shelburne and Buckland; John C. Boyden, W. Scott Keith and J. Douglas Abercrombie, Jr., Deerfield; Whitfield Moretti, Millers Falls and Erving; Rev. William E. Park and A. Gordon Moody, Northfield.

Northfield Post 9874 On The Air Dec. 4

Convening of the new Congress and inauguration of President Harry Truman in January may mark the beginning of some revolutionary actions in government. That opinion is expressed in a Veterans' of Foreign Wars broadcast to be heard over station WHAI at 4:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon, December the fourth.

Dr. J. W. Bennett, Commander of Northfield Post 9874, V. F. W., in Northfield said today that congressional revisions have opened the way for increased opposition to Soviet Russia's expansion.

"Our November election gave the world a strong demonstration of democracy in action," Dr. Bennett declared. "Now it is up to us to follow through vigorously against problems facing us, chief among which is communism."

"We were warned 95 years ago by Karl Marx, father of communism, that the only way to deal with Russian aggression would be to get tough with Russia. We have just started. Now what will the next four years bring?"

The Saturday broadcast is the ninety-seventh in a series of "Speak Up For Democracy" programs prepared by the National Americanism Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

THE OVERSEAS

Camiers, November 20, 1948.
To my friends of the Northfield Boys' School,

A little after the opening of school, our principal, Mr. Delestra, explained to us that the town of Northfield, U. S. A., had decided to adopt our community, so terribly ravaged by war.

Mr. Delestra and I decided at once to write the boys of our own age attending the Northfield schools to thank them warmly for the kind interest they are taking in the restoration of our town, and to tell them of the hardships we endured under the German occupation.

Our community, situated in the north of the Channel, was invaded by the Germans at the end of May, 1940. Immediately the invaders settled in as conquerors. The cement factories were taken over and we had to submit to all the whims of the enemy. The Germans occupied our classrooms, then started their work along the coast, near our homes. When the Allies bombed these German defenses in 1944, we had to abandon our very homes and all my schoolmates were evacuated toward the interior of France for many months. When they came back after the German retreat, many of us found our homes demolished and pillaged.
Imagine our sadness in finding ourselves in front of the ruins of our own homes. A pile of bricks only showed foundation of our homes.
The furniture, clothes, school equipment, everything was destroyed, but we didn't lose courage and little by little we were rebuilding. There is still a good deal to do; some of us are still busy in need of clothing and shoes; and we live in bombed buildings, but repairs are under way. Our Boys' school which has 110 students, divided among three grades, ages 6 to 14 years, has just been also partially repaired; it had suffered very much from the German occupation. Unfortunately our school equipment is very poor indeed and we lack a good many of the books we need for our classes. We know that we cannot use your books but we have asked the Head of our school to tell you what we can use in our classes. In a letter to the Committee, he will let you know what we need.

With our thanks for all that you are doing for us, please accept, school friends of Northfield, the gratitude of the 110 students of the Camiers Boys' School.

School, age 10½ years.

COLONIAL CHRONICLES

A New Series

ENTITLED

"THE FORT AND THE RIVER"

With the visions of the three Hadley troopers still fresh in my memory we waded through a sea of rank grass that brushed against my face, and I had difficulty in keeping Uncle Eb and Preserved in sight.

We were all leading our horses, for Uncle Eb had cautioned about what might lie ahead in Northfield.
The Hadley troopers heads served as reminders.

Finally up ahead, I saw John Hutchinson break out of the sea of grass into a clearing, followed by the others. Preserved was still lost in the tall grass, but in a moment we both came out together and looked upon a scene of forgotten desolation.

All eyes swept the whole vista of the abandoned settlement, looking for the same thing — Indians.
If they had been there, they were gone by now — only their council fires might remain.

"Well, we'll do no good here, the old town highway must be over there if my memory is serving me," said Uncle Eb. "don't mount, lead your horses."

We fell in behind Uncle Eb, with Preserved just ahead and rolling along, with the nodding head of his horse above his shoulder. Much of the land about us appeared to have been but recently broken up by the Indians — much of the rank grass and shrub growth had been burned over. An acrid smell was in the air — so the Indians were not too long gone.

Then we came upon the old highway, of the first settlement, now grown over, but it was the highway, wagon ruts were still in evidence under the thick grass.

Uncle Eb turned to us and said, "We'll head for the brook a bit to the north, and we'll camp for the night — if we don't find other settlers in sight". Of course he meant Indians. My stomach quivered. Preserved came over, "Are you ready for a couple of scalps, Benjie?" he said and nudged me. "I guess I am," I replied, but not very convincingly I'm sure. On the trail the Indians had been far away, and I'd been eager to get at them — but now, well, it seemed as if every tree hid a Canada Indian, and every snapping twig betrayed a redskin giant.

We had seen, or rather Uncle Eb had pointed out, where the thatched roofed huts of the first company had stood. Now they were invisible in the grass and shrubs, for the Indians had been thorough in their work. Everything burned to the ground. Tomorrow we would have to find the lines of the home-lots. But tomorrow was still far off, today and tonight were still here, and the council fire embers were still warm, for upon reaching a point above the brook that tum-bled into the river, Uncle Eb and John Hutchinson came upon the blackened remains of a small fire.
A wisp of smoke curled up and drifted away from it.

"We'll stay here and make camp, leave your horses tied here, and look about you. I see no sign of devils, but they must be near," saying this Uncle Eb went toward the brook, with gun in hand. I took up my gun and grimly followed, with lurking shadows looming over head — Indian shadows all, I was sure. Preserved scrambled along with us, leaving the others with the horses.

Overlooking the falls, that fell in a spray down the steep course of the brook, Uncle Eb squinted hard as if trying to penetrate every tree along the banks. "Don't see no sign of them, but I'll bet a keg of rum they're here — I can SMELL em."

Preserved sniffed a little and said, "Don't smell a thing, Eb." My uncle looked hard at the found Hadley tramping man, probably wishing he were back in Hadley.

"You know Benjie," said Uncle Eb, "relaxing his vigil a little, 'this is where Richard Lyman, John Woodward and William Clarke should put up their mill. Look at that water, plenty of power there.
Yes, it's a fine place for a mill.
Enough of this though," with this Uncle Eb straightened up, "you and Preserved stay here for a time, keep watching along the farther bank. I'll send John down with something for your stomachs, and take care Preserved, that you don't fill yours before Benjie gets his."

With this, we were left by the brook. The afternoon sun was still above the tree tops.
Preserved and I were sitting silently on a fallen log, each immersed in singular thoughts. Mine were of Indians — Preserved's, no doubt, of food.

Suddenly, quietly, Preserved flicked my wrist with his finger and whispered, "Look Benjie, but don't move, look toward the east."

I tried to make my eyes move without twisting my head, but I saw nothing.

"Move your head just a little Benjie, and I could feel my companion's arm quiver against mine.
My eyes, I'm sure were like saucers, and I twisted my head, and sitting on a log was a red — squirrel. With this my tenseness exploded, but Preserved ducked my swing, and with a laugh that brought tears to his eyes he bent over on his knees and shook all over.

Finally with a gasp he sat up again, wiped his eyes and blew his nose on the ground. "I was still tense — and a little frightened." Then — A CRACK — a NOISE — right behind us. Fast stock still.
The corners of Preserved's mouth stretched tight, then he fell off the log, with an arrow in his back.
I thought, Still I didn't move, and only my scalp twitched.

Preserved lay motionless. I heard no sound, then a voice, "Here's your food!"
It was John Hutchinson.

DICKINSON MEMORIAL LIBRARY

MRS. FLORENCE PHELPS, Librarian
Mrs. Arline Randall, Assistant Librarian

Open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 1 to 6 except Wednesday and Friday when it closes at 6 p. m.

Although books are very slow in coming in after an order is placed, we do have the following books which have been received during a November and are now ready for circulation.

First of all, a few for the children: Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse, the P. S. A., and Donald Duck and his nephews; "Always Ready," by Marguerite Henry; "Beau Dore," by Peter Crowell; for the older children: "Phantom Bickfield," by Brian; "Carol Goes Back Stage," by Helen Boylston.

For the adults, we have: "Dead and his Country and Under a willow tree," by MacDougall; a western, "Valley of Violence," by Trimble; "Clouded Moon," Howard; "Shining Mountains," by Van Every; "Roanoke Hundred," by Agilis Fletcher; and his latest novel, "Big Fisherman," by Lloyd Douglas, which promises to be fully as popular as "The Robe".

Mrs. Anna L. Gohard tells her own story in "Rural Parish," of her life as the wife of a Methodist Minister now in Litchfield, Minn. She writes, and we quote: "There is very little about village parsonage life I do not thoroughly enjoy. Music has always been a major interest, my cello and 'Open Sesame' into every community. At present I am directing the church choir. . . . My most special interest is mothering four little people . . . aged two, four, six and eight — two girls, two boys. . . . Of course, I love books and to dabble in writing."

The life of Mary Roberts Rinehart is brought up to date in her "My Story — and seventeen more years." Are you interested in Jim Farley's story? We have it. According to one reviewer, the book is "frank, outspoken and revealing, giving the truth about two of the most controversial political figures in modern America: Franklin D. Roosevelt and Jim Farley." Do you like your history pictorially? Then see our Presidents on parade, by Milkollon, from Washington to Truman. Contains some of the best photos of our first ladies also.

For the next two weeks we have a special exhibit in the reading room, pictures of New England churches, taken by Miss Maud Hamilton of East Northfield, which she has kindly loaned to us for exhibition. It is a most unusual collection, containing 35 cards of carefully mounted snapshots, with name and place of each church and appropriate remarks. Rhode Island seems to be the only state not represented. One card contains the pictures of five churches which

The 'Telephone Hour'

At the meeting of the Northfield Garden Club to be held Monday evening, December 7th at 7:45 o'clock at Alexander Hall the "Telephone Hour", will be presented by transcription and a demonstration will be made of the use of the telephone by Manager Spencer of the Greenfield office. Philip Porter, chairman of the program committee promises a most interesting entertainment.

Town Topics

The new fascinating comedy, "Goodbye My Fancy," with Madeline Carroll in the leading role is now being presented at the Morosco Theatre in New York. The play is being presented by Richard Aldrich in company with other artists. Mr. Aldrich is a former summer resident of Northfield and is well known here.

The deer season will open on Monday morning at 6:30 o'clock and a number of Northfield nomads will be out. Only shot guns not larger than 10 gauge and bow and arrows can be used. All reports of killing or wounded must be made within 48 hours to the Commissioner of Conservation with the usual requirements.

The Republican Town Committee will meet this Friday evening at the home of the Chairman, George McEwan, to arrange for the Republican caucus to be held about the middle of December as provided by law. The committee has not made known its position of the nomination of candidates for the various public offices.

Rev. Joseph W. Reeves of the local Congregational Church has been the speaker on the devotional hour each Tuesday morning during November over radio WHEA of Greenfield. Many have enjoyed his messages and the complete program. Mrs. G. P. Blyden of Greenfield formerly a resident of this town is at the Franklin County hospital. The annual Advent Corporate Communion of St. James Episcopal church of Greenfield was held last Sunday morning at eight o'clock. A number of men from Northfield having membership in the parish attended the service of dedication and fellowship.

Legion Ladies Send Gifts To Hospital

The American Legion Auxiliary met recently in the Veterans room of the town hall, with president, Mrs. Laura Stone presiding. Twelve members were present, with three new members also in attendance.

Christmas Gift committee chairman Mrs. Edward Luciw reported that 39 gifts had been collected and sent to Leeds Hospital, Veterans Administration, Northampton. The chairman also thanked all who made donations.

It was voted to hold a Christmas party during the next regular meeting, Dec. 14. A committee is also making plans for a rummage sale and supper after the holidays.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Frederick Chapin and Mrs. Edward Luciw.

WINTER SportsUp and Down Statistics on New Hampshire Ski Facilities

If a skier were to use once every ski lift and rope tow in New Hampshire this winter he (or she) would travel uphill approximately 98,811 feet or 18½ miles. These figures were recently uncovered by the State Planning and Development Commission while in the process of compiling 1948-49 ski information on New Hampshire. Total verticle ascent of ski lifts and tows was not computed.

The total distance the skier would travel in gliding back down the hill or mountain was believed to be considerably greater than the uphill total, as trails and slopes are usually longer than the lift that serves them.

Included in the above totals were the famous Aerial Passenger Tramway at Franconia Notch, which travels a mile to the top of Cannon Mountain, and the 1944-foot Alpine lift on the summit of the mountain. The popular Skimobile on Cranmore Mountain, North Conway, added 4965 feet to the total. The chair lifts at the Belknap Mountain's Recreational Area, Gilford, and new Mount Sunapee State Park in Newbury each added 3200 feet. The 4000 foot chair lift at new Thorn Mountain Ski Area and the 3200 foot Constance Alpine lift on Black Mountain, both in Jackson, are also included. The 2000 foot Alpine lift at the Mittsfield, Franconia, and the 1200 foot J-Bar lift at Oak Hill, Hanover, complete the list of major New Hampshire ski lifts.
